

LARGEST ENERGY PROJECT

Al-Can line gets joint approval

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Carter announced Thursday his official approval of another historic construction project, a $10 billion pipeline to carry Alaskan natural gas south through Canada along the Alaska Highway.

His decision in favor of the Alaska Highway route, which was proposed in Canada by Foothills Pipe Lines Yukon Ltd. and in the U.S. by Alcan Pipeline Co., appeared to doom the rival El Paso proposal to move the gas from Alaska by ship without crossing Canadian territory.

Shortly after Carter's announcement, a key congressional supporter of the El Paso plan, Senator Mike Gravel Dem. Alaska indicated his belief that Congress will accept the president's choice.

With Prime Minister Trudeau standing beside him, Carter told reporters the 2,500 mile Alaska Highway pipeline, "the largest single private energy project in history," is further evidence of the spirit of co-operation between the two countries.

Trudeau compared the project with the building of the St. Lawrence seaway, saying the pipeline will be even more important. He added that the two countries in a "spirit of complete openness" on the pipeline issue.

An agreement in principle was reached in Ottawa last Friday between U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Canadian House Leader Allan MacEachen. The Canadian cabinet approved the although their joint statement indicated that Canada had withdrawn its proposal that the line take a more costly route, through Dawson City, to make a possible future pipeline for Canadian use less expensive.

There was no immediate agreement Tuesday and Carter's approval was announced just after his 5 minute discussion with Trudeau on Thursday.

Neither leader gave details of the Canada U.S. agreement on the pipeline, official confirmation of reports that Canada also dropped proposals to have the pipeline carry the cost of a $200 million Yukon socio-economic fund and to delay the construction start to 1981 from 1979.

Letter carriers sign; sorters may follow

OTTAWA (CP)—Post master-general Jean-Jacques Blais signed a contract Thursday with the Letter Carriers Union of Canada and said there have been some encouraging developments in the dispute with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers CUPW.

"I hope that within a brief period of time, we'll be back at the bargaining table with CUPW," Blais said.

But he said he is not going to elaborate until both sides are "ensconced in comfortable chairs with both feet firmly under the bargaining table."

Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 22,000 member CUPW, said he did not think a detailed comment would "serve the best interests of our members or the public."

But he also expressed hope contract talks will resume shortly.

CUPW and the post office attempted in May to start negotiations for a new agreement. But those talks broke off after an hour and there have been no meetings since then.

Old agreements covering the letter carriers and CUPW, which represents mail sorters and postal clerks, expired last June.

The one-year contract signed Thursday by the letter carriers was reached without any slowdowns or work stoppages. It provides an eight percent salary increase plus a cost of living adjustment clause that applies when the inflation rate is more than six percent.

If approved by the anti-inflation board, the contract will bring the top rate of pay for a carrier with two year's experience to $13,878.82 a year. Union president Robert McGarry said the carriers voted 83.3 percent in favor of the agreement.

CUPW also has called for a royal commission of inquiry into what it calls incompetence and poor administration at the post office.

McGarry admitted there has been a serious loss of public confidence in the post office, but he said there is no need for a royal commission.

The problems of the post office and the unions should be worked out by management and the heads of the unions involved, McGarry said.

NOBODY KNOWS

Arms dump in Interior?

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—RCMP here said Thursday they know nothing of an alleged Protestant arms dump in the area.

The charge was made Wednesday by James Kennedy, a man immigration authorities say is an Irish Republican Army terrorist.

In an interview from a hideout somewhere in Quebec, Kennedy told a Vancouver reporter that he will disclose concrete evidence of the existence of the arms dump simultaneously in Canada and Ireland sometime in the near future.

Kennedy, 37, said by police to be James McCann who is wanted for terrorist activities in Europe, was released from the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre Oakalla near Vancouver on $5,000 bail while he appeals a July 14 deportation order.

Kennedy, a declared member of the Sin Fein, the political wing of the IRA, said fun-running activities were occurring on the West and East Coast of Canada.

"There is still a major arms dump near Prince George and the RCMP in Mission east of Vancouver know about it," Kennedy said.

"The RCMP are pursuing this in Mission," he said.

Police spokesmen in Prince George and Mission denied knowledge of such an investigation Thursday. A Vancouver spokesman would only say that the police force strongly denies that it is turning a blind eye to any gun-running activities.

Fame sought by gum chewer

ESQUIMALT, B.C. (CP)—Ricky Mathison's chewing gum lost its flavor on the bedpost overnight because he keeps it in his mouth.

He parks it on the roof of his mouth or between his teeth and upper lip while he sleeps and so far, he hasn't choked or four it in his hair in the morning.

The 12 year old resident of this Victoria suburb has had a piece of gum on the go since June 7 because he wants his name in the Guinness Book of Records.

He said Thursday that he isn't sure what the record is, as there's nothing listed in the Guinness Book, but he thinks he's set a new one. For now, he's just going to keep on chewing with no particular target in mind.

He only chews a small lump of gum, half a stick, and every three or four days he adds another half stick because the gum seems to wear away.

The grade 7 student says his teachers are sympathetic to his record-setting efforts, but then he doesn't chew all the time either.

SERIOUS DISCUSSIONS AT PICNIC

Liberals will 'take some lumps' this winter

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance department officials continued work Thursday on a new federal make-work program while Liberal MPs ended what one said were "bloody serious discussions" on the economy with a picnic in the nearby Gatineau Hills.

"We realize we're going to have to take some lumps this winter," said British Columbia MP Jack Pearsall. L-Coast Chilcotin as Liberal MPs completed morning talks on unemployment and other economic concerns. "There are just no easy solutions."

The Liberal meetings, part of a two-day private planning session prior to a mid-October opening of Parliament, ended with an afternoon picnic at Prime Minister Trudeau's Harrington Lake, Que., summer retreat in the Gatineau Hills about 20 miles north of Ottawa.

As it ended, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said cabinet would sound out several job creation options on Liberal MPs before adding to current federal plans to sink $458 million into make-work projects before the accounting year ends next March 31.

Meanwhile, senior finance department officials, who drafted employment plans that were rejected by cabinet earlier this year, were working on new proposals ordered by the government.

They plan to spend the weekend at another Gatineau Hills retreat drawing up a job program that will likely form part of the government's policy-reviewing throne speech address read perhaps by the Queen when Parliament resumes in October.

Cullen said any new program would have to get the blessing of the finance minister who replaces Donald Macdonald, the 45 year old MP for the Toronto riding of Rosedale who announced his resignation from cabinet earlier this week.

Trudeau is said to have put a higher priority on plans to offset the steadily rising unemployment rate - it stood at 8.1 percent of the work force in July, or 878,000 workers - than on the struggle to keep the country together in the face of threats from Ren Levesque's separatist government in Quebec.

The prime minister may give some indication of his government's plans for the unemployed at a news conference today. He returned to Ottawa on Thursday from an overnight visit to Washington to witness the signing of new Panama canal treaties and a meeting with President Carter.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent has scheduled a meeting with reporters shortly before Trudeau's news conference, and officials in Broadbent's office say the NDP leader plans to launch another assault on the government's handling of the jobless situation.

Labor and business leaders, however, were cool to federal plans for a consultative forum that might have developed ways to reduce unemployment.

Government has become increasingly upset with business reluctance to use tax cuts offered in the last federal budget. Macdonald is an incentive to expand operations and create jobs.

It takes more than rain to sour Dawn Coxford's enthusiasm for softball. The Royal Bank pitcher threw the first ball in this weekend's scrub tourney, but her ingenuity didn't help much. Her team lost 25 to 13 to Overwater in six innings. Before the game, home plate had to be excavated from the mud. Games schedule for the weekend tourney is on page 5.

Coping with instant fame is nothing to Channel swimmer

FOLKESTONE, England, (CP)—Cindy Nicholas, 20, of Toronto, spent nearly 20 hours conquering the frigid waters of the English Channel — then fainted and sprained her right wrist in the warmth of her bathroom.

She swam round trip, non-stop from Dover to Cap Fris Nez and back, something no other woman has ever done. She slashed an incredible 10 hours, five minutes off the men's record.

"I was in control all the time," she said. "It hurt; it hurt a lot, but that's something you learn to live with."

Cindy had been without sleep for 40 hours as she spoke with reporters and coped with phone calls from news organizations in North America and England.

She walked into the water at Dover just about dawn on Wednesday. Nearly 20 hours later, cut and bruised, she "crawled out" back up the same beach.

Her two-way swim gave her a total of five Channel crossings, equalling the record set in the 1960's by Greta Anderson, a Dane from the U.S.

"I'm coming back next year," Cindy said. "Definitely."

She wants the title Queen of the Channel, which she shares with Anderson. She also wants the England-to-France record — eight hours and 56 minutes, held by Wendy Brooke of England.

Cindy set out for that record — she already holds the France-to-England mark on the first leg of her swim.

Under new regulations, a swimmer must walk clear of the water to qualify.

"I had trouble getting out and getting back in," Cindy said.

Her parents — Jim and Vicky Nicholas — were with her all the way in the accompanying pilot boat.

"It was like Highway 401 out there at night," her mother said.

Cindy said "some very large ships came very close. Some of the ferries seemed to want to give their passengers a close look."

Eight hours of her swim was accomplished in darkness and Mrs. Nicholas said: "It's a garbage dump out there, with ships, boxes, bottles and seaweed."

"And it was cold. The air temperature was 57 and the water temperature was 62."

Cindy's feat — the record she broke, 30 hours even, was set two years ago by Jon Erikson of Chicago — made her an instant celebrity.

One of the telephone calls she received was from Paul Martin, Canada's High Commissioner to Britain, inviting her to dinner.

Cindy, at five-foot-five, normally weighs 135 pounds but she put on 12 pounds before her swim as protection against the chill water.

During her nearly 20 hours, she "put on another five pounds" by snacking on chocolate bars, grapes, soft drinks and sausages.

In addition to her determination to return next year she has another goal in mind — swimming the turbulent Strait of Juan de Fuca in British Columbia, but that's somewhere in the future.

THE ALCAN PIPELINE: Largest private energy project

'It won't do anything' — Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — A U.S.-Canada agreement to build a natural gas pipeline along the proposed Alaska highway route will do nothing to meet Canada's energy needs, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark said Thursday.

The proposed route, agreed to in principle in Washington following a meeting between Prime Minister Trudeau and President Jimmy Carter, provides no access to Canada's gas reserves in the Mackenzie delta, Clark said through a spokesman.

Construction of a pipeline would provide some short-term economic benefits for the northern region, Clark said, but would not alleviate the problem of Canada's dwindling gas supplies.

At best, a Canadian line would not be built until sometime in the mid to late 1980's.

Clark said he is concerned whether Canada's negotiators have adequately protected the national interest "and obtained the benefits for Canada to which we are entitled."

Clark hoped these concerns could be laid to rest when precise details of the agreement between the two countries are released, possibly within a few days.

'Yes it will' — U.S.

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The pipeline route chosen by President Carter to carry Alaskan natural gas to the continental United States should relieve potential supply problems in the Pacific Northwest states, according to state and industry officials.

"The Alaskan supply is going to relieve our supply picture somewhat," said Janet McLennan, Governor Bob Straub's administrative assistant for natural resources.

She said the pipeline "would provide a so-called western leg which would give us some access to gas that is independent of Canada."

About 70 per cent of the natural gas used in Oregon is imported from Canada, which has dramatically increased its rates. Some observers also worry the Canadian supply might be withheld or reduced when current contracts expire in 1989.

The route selection announced Thursday by Carter and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau of Canada is a $10 billion pipeline from Alaska's gas-rich North Slope to Fairbanks, then across Canada along the Alaska Highway.

The Canadian route has been endorsed by Straub, who was out of the state and not available for comment.

Competing proposals would have built the gas line along the route of the existing Alaskan oil pipeline to the state's southern coast, where the gas would be liquefied and transported to the West Coast by ship.

Firm disappointed

HOUSTON (Reuter) — An El Paso Co. spokesman said Thursday the firm was disappointed by President Carter's decision favoring a gas pipeline across Canada because it "ignores benefits to the U.S. inherent in an all-American system."

El Paso said the proposed pipeline "commits this country to a multi-billion dollar project favoring Canada with enforceable guarantees regarding matters of the utmost importance in the protection of the total public interest."

El Paso has lost its battle

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senator Mike Gravel of Alaska, one of the key congressional advocates of the El Paso plan to ship natural gas from Alaska, said Thursday that El Paso supporters have lost their battle.

In a statement issued shortly after President Carter announced approval of the rival Alaska Highway project, the Democratic senator indicated his belief that there is no chance Congress will over-rule the president. Under terms of special U.S. legislation on the pipeline issue, Congress has 60 days to accept or reject the president's decision.

Gravel saw some minor success in the fact that the Alaska Highway project received U.S. and Canadian approval rather than another cross-Canada alternative — the Arctic gas plan — that would have involved little construction in Alaska.

"We apparently gave partially lost the Alaska gas line. I say partially because there will still be some 70-odd miles of pipeline built in Alaska and it will serve the second-largest city in Alaska."

Gravel also noted that Alaskans won an earlier political battle concerning Alaskan oil. An oil pipeline was built across Alaska and the oil is being moved by ship from Alaska's south coast, just as El Paso proposed to do with the natural gas. "I am not terribly gratified with the decision today but I think that on balance if we had to win just one, we won the right one, two, or three years back."

An aide to Gravel predicted that the Alaska Highway project will easily win congressional approval, aided by a solid bloc of Midwest representatives who want it because a cross-Canada pipeline will deliver the Alaskan gas directly to their states.

U.S. senate gears for Panama Canal fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the ink barely dry on the new Panama canal treaties, Ronald Reagan and other conservative opponents opened a campaign Thursday to block U.S. Senate ratification of the pacts.

Reagan said the agreement to turn the canal over to the Panamanians will weaken the U.S. as an international power and increase chances that the Panamanians will seize control of the waterway before the year 2000, when U.S. control is to end.

"There is no way this will be seen as magnanimous," the former California governor said. "It will be seen as a further retreat by the United States."

Reagan's testimony before a Senate judiciary subcommittee hearing came as the two chief U.S. negotiators for the treaties were testifying before a House of Representatives international relations committee.

Sol Linowitz and Ellisworth Bunker said Congress will be asked to approve $345 million in economic aid for Panama, including $50 million for canal defences.

Asked what the U.S. would get in return for the aid, Linowitz said: "The most important thing we get is enhanced assurance of an open, accessible, secure canal."

With the leaders of 26 visiting countries looking on, including Prime Minister Trudeau, President Carter and Panamanian President Omar Torrijos signed the treaty Wednesday night, culminating 13 years of negotiations.

During his unsuccessful run for the Republican presidential nomination last year, Reagan raised the canal issue and criticized former president Gerald Ford's attempts — now completed by President Carter — to negotiate a new treaty.

Ford is supporting the treaties and was present for the signing ceremony. He predicted Thursday that the Senate ratification vote "is going to be very, very close... it's going to be a tough fight."

The four witnesses who testified Thursday before the Senate subcommittee are opposed to the treaty. All senators, including subcommittee chairman

James Allen (Dem. Ala.), who appeared for the hearing are conservatives who have said they will vote against ratification.

In his testimony, Reagan said student radicals in Panama have already said they will continue to demonstrate as long as there is a U.S. presence, with or without a treaty.

If Panamanian leaders are pressed by radicals to ignore the treaties, there is nothing to prevent Panamanian leaders from seizing control, he said.

GOOD OL' JIMMY! GOOD OL' PIERRE!

WASHINGTON (CP) — Jimmy and Pierre, as U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau call each other socially, appear to be cementing the friendship established earlier this year.

The two government leaders went out of their way at a news conference Thursday to thank each other for the friendship and co-operation exhibited in negotiations leading to agreement on a northern pipeline.

Both said the talks had taken place in that spirit and could only help bring the two countries closer together.

The U.S. president praised him as a world leader and said that as a new man in office he had much to learn from Trudeau who has been Canadian prime minister since 1968.

"I want to re-emphasize my thanks to you, Pierre for your friendship and co-operation," Carter said at the end of the session.

"I'm grateful for these final words," Trudeau replied. "If I can help you with your electors at some point I'd like to do so," he added jokingly.

Winter will be tough say farmers

LEWISTON, Me. (AP) — Keep your long Johns handy — the Farmers' Almanac says the coming winter is going to be a bitter one.

"For 1977-78, we show another rough winter, with cold and snow aplenty although not as bad as the winter just past," says the almanac's 161st annual edition, just off the presses.

The venerable publication was right on target last year when it forecast "a big, bad winter," for the United States, followed by a "scorchingly hot" summer.

"We predicted it first," says almanac editor Ray Feiger, 67, who obtains his forecasts from Harry Bule, a retired astronomer and school administrator in Inverness, Fla.

"He uses a secret formula, passed down since the almanac was founded in 1818," says Feiger. "It's based on sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

The almanac has been issuing forecasts 52 years longer than the U.S. National Weather Service, says Feiger, who rarely passes up an opportunity for a good natured jab at the government run bureau.

"We call them a 'non-prophet' agency," he says. "Despite the almanac's warning of a cold and snowy winter, its long-range prognostications offer the prospect of relief from extremes of heat and cold."

The summer of 1978 will be moderate and more pleasant and in another year or two there will be a mild winter, Feiger says.

In addition to weather information, this year's almanac is filled with the usual blend of homespun homilies, one-lone jokes, inspirational essays and recipes, includes ones for a "concrete" pecan pleand hot tuna dogs."

Feiger's 48 page to be confused with the 185 year old Old Farmers Almanac, is sold to banks and other businesses, which distribute it free to their customers.

Collision no accident says hang glider

By DONNA VALLIERES
Herald staff writer

A hang-gliding accident outside Terrace which sent one glider pilot to hospital last week may have been the result of carelessness on the part of the two pilots involved.

Dave Toop, a local gliding instructor who was at the scene of the mishap, said the gliders were flying too close together and existing air conditions caused the mid-air collision.

Ed Morris, a 26 year old logger, suffered a broken ankle, four broken ribs and a broken jaw after his craft collided with another glider flown by Cst. Randy Cur-tain, 21, of the Terrace RCMP. Morris is still in Mills Memorial Hospital.

"I feel there was a little neglect on both parts," Toop said. He said the two were close enough to talk to each other before they collided about 3,000 feet above the landing site and 300 feet from the nearest mountain surface.

Toop said hang-glider accidents are extremely rare and there has been only one other accident of this type to have occurred anywhere in Canada since the sport began.

Pilots do not need a license to fly the winged crafts, but there are training courses available to teach them safety precautions.

"All we can do is suggest that people take these training courses," Toop said.

The gliding instructor, a member of the Skeena Hanggliders Association, said he is hoping a rating system will be set up for Thornhill Mountain, the take-off point for local gliders, meaning that gliders using the site should have a certified rating.

"It's the only way we can enforce people to fly properly," he said, although he admitted even then unauthorized gliders could not be stopped.

The two pilots involved in the accident were also members of the local club.

Curtain, who escaped injuries, stated both he and Morris have about 30 hours flying time in gliders launched off Thornhill Mountain.

Dave Neil, a civil aviation inspector with the Ministry of Transport in Vancouver, said he doesn't know if this particular accident will be investigated, although if serious injury or death had occurred they would do so.

Neil said he was surprised that two gliders were in the same air space.

"They're supposed to be looking out for each other," he said.

Neil said the hang-gliders are a self-regulating body although the ministry of transport does recognize them as aircraft.

The MOT does control all air space, though, and Neil stated that the airways department is reviewing its policy on hanggliders.

Spellbound by the sly wolf, Little Red Riding Hood still has great difficulty believing her good grandmother can really have such big ears. The classic children's story, rewritten by director Jane Patch, who plays the cowering cat in

Vancouver's Marine Building: art deco with class

There's a wealth of tourist sights and attractions in Vancouver and many may feel they've seen them all, but then, there is the Marine Building.

Dwarfed by concrete and glass, thermo-regulated highrise office buildings around, it stands at Hastings and Burrard.

When it was completed in 1930 it was Western Canada's tallest building at 25 storeys. But even then, it wasn't the size that really gave the Marine Building its unique character. It was the care that went into constructing it a special sort of care.

The next time you board a plane for the old world, looking forward to inspecting all those famous monuments and architecture, think of this: a most accomplished and complete example of the "Art Deco" style in the world is located in Vancouver. Yes, the Marine Building.

What's "Art Deco"? It was a style of decoration prevalent in the 1920's and 1930's that was very ornate, intricate and beautiful. It's characterized by zig-zag and geometric ornament. The Marine Building has it in abundance.

It was called the Marine Building because of the type of businesses located there: trades involving shipping. The intent of the building's design was to compliment these merchant traders! The sea motif is everywhere.

The building's entire length is covered by a wave of seahorses and marine life.

By the imposing entrance archway, a gargoy-like ornamentation depicts the bow of a ship, the face on the prow reminding us, perhaps, of the sea's relentlessness.

The sculpture of the upper arch shows marine plant life while at the sides are mural panels of famous sailing ships that came to British Columbia's coast: Drake's Golden Hind in 1577; Quadra's Sonora in 1775; Cook's Resolution in 1778; and finally and inevitably, Vancouver's Discovery.

On the right hand side is depicted the Empress of Japan, the Canadian Pacific liner, which for many years plied her way across the Pacific to the Orient.

These panels, on their own, are a lasting monument to Vancouver, the harbour city.

The massive entrance shows the sun setting in the west with a ship entering the harbour in the foreground, symbolic of Vancouver's role as "gateway to the orient".

Through the revolving entrance doors you walk into an unusually high and spacious concourse. You almost feel you're in a famous cathedral and must speak in a whisper and furtively snap your pictures.

Even the lighting is unique. Indirect illumination comes from the prows of ships. The walls are finished in green-and-blue-tinted tile, again suggestive of the sea, and the high beamed ceiling further intimates the vaulted spaciousness of a cathedral. Even the floor is finished uniquely - built of cork and depicting the signs of the Zodiac!

More control, promotion and less red tape

VANCOUVER (CP)- More government encouragement, increased Canadian ownership and less red tape are among the suggestions being offered at the British Columbia Economic Symposium by panellists discussing ways of expanding the province's economic base.

Don Duguid, president of the B.C. Development Corp., told the meeting that B.C. needs strong encouragement from the federal government, which has yet to take the strong stand needed to let the province expand its resource development and move into other secondary interest.

"The excessive federal tax situation is discouraging, and the seeming inability of our central government to make firm decisions without endless judicial hearings, studies, task forces sub-committees often render major projects non-competitive and place an almost impossible burden on our province," he said.

Among the projects he suggested could be developed in B.C. are electro-metallurgical reduction facilities, expansion of ports in Vancouver, Kitimat and Prince Rupert and a stronger agricultural base.

MLA Gary Lauk NDP Vancouver Centre the provincial opposition's economic development critic, that government power and bureaucracy are becoming more centralized at greater cost to the business community.

To encourage economic growth here, Lauk suggested and corporation taxes and in taxes paid by enterprises of 200 employees or less, setting up apprenticeship programs for local businesses and a revival of the B.C. Development Corp's loan program for community businesses.

Dr. P.C. Tressell, president of Techwest Enterprises Ltd., said that a resource-rich country, Canada should turn to developing sophisticated technology in its own areas of concern. He mentioned transportation, communications, raw-materials processing and possibly nuclear power.

"This probably will mean steering support to selected Canadian companies," he said.

"In an attempt to strengthen Canadian control and buy into foreign owned Canadian manufacturing, consideration may be given to a tax rebate, say of 10 to 15 percent, to companies with over 75 percent Canadian ownership."

Sandy Sheinin, of Coppers and Lybrand, chartered accountants, said Canada's chaotic tax system has cost the country vast amounts of money in time and effort put in by management to figure it out, and in lost business opportunities deferred because of the uncertain tax conditions.

The resource sector is the one that has suffered most from the constant changes in tax laws, Sheinin said.

"There is little doubt that the Canadian resource tax system has changed more over the past few years than in any other country in the free world. Quite frankly, it has been bush league."

In another address at the symposium, Flo Whynard, people of the Yukon are holding their breath waiting for a final go-ahead on construction of a gas pipeline along the Alaska Highway.

She told the symposium that the district is "waiting for Jimmy Carter to drop the other shoe," approving the pipeline.

The Yukon wants the project to go through but is aware of its potentially disrupting effects on its population and wealth, she said.

"We are in for a big development if that route is chosen. The economic effects of this and other developments will be felt on the B.C. side of the border as well." Chamber of Commerce, continues today and Friday.

Quiet Carter now talks with big stick

UNITED NATIONS CP-U.S. President Carter now in the month of his office, has shifted subtly from open to quiet and traditional diplomacy in his dealings with foreign powers.

No longer heard are the public demands, so often expressed just after his inauguration last January, for better observance of human rights in other countries in the Soviet Union in particular. He has quietly eased on public suggestions and proposals for a Middle East peace settlement.

His UN ambassador, Andrew Young, also appears to have softened his own once-strident human right campaign. Young, often indiplomatic hot water for his jibes at foreign countries with barely a mention in the newspapers.

One consequence of the new approach has been a gradual improvement in Soviet-American relations, which went sour at mid-year as a result of Carter's criticism and his sending of a letter of support to a prominent dissident in Moscow.

That action prompted the Soviet Union to reject proposals advanced by Carter for the nuclear arms limitation talks SALT, and stirred Communist Party Leader Leonid Brezhnev publicly to accuse the Soviet internal affairs and warn that it is "unthinkable" that relations between two countries could develop normally on that basis.

Diplomats here privately questioned Carter's wisdom in pressing the human rights issue on the eve of the SALT negotiations, suggesting it was impossible for the Soviet Union to agree to arms talks in the face of American pressure on an issue as sensitive to the Kremlin as that of the Moscow dissidents.

Brezhnev has turned down a Carter proposal that the two men get together in a meeting in August to explore means of overcoming the impasse between their two countries.

Washington officials are said to have characterized the new Carter approach as being a consequence of the maturing of a young administration, rather than diplomatic retreat.

There also may be recognition, often expressed by diplomats here, that so-called open diplomacy often forces parties in a dispute to assume inflexible public positions and creates a deadlock rather than encourages negotiation.

The easing of pressure from Washington has been accompanied by progress in Soviet-American arm talks and the two they have found the basic for negotiations on a new nuclear test ban treaty. Negotiations are expected to start in October.

VOICE OF READERS

Labor's role

The Labor Day editorial as reported in the Terrace Herald entitled, "Labor's New Role," raises some serious doubts as to whether the new editorial staff of the Herald has done much research into union activities.

While the Labour movement obviously can stand improvement and critique, in some areas the article is saturated with half truths and worse.

Today's workers do indeed need wage settlements to keep abreast of the spiralling cost of living. It is ludicrous to suggest that bargaining should only be discussions to keep up with the rising cost of living, when in fact wage-controls are pegged four percent below the inflation rate, at a time when multinationals and other large employers are reaping unlimited profits. An example is the Ford Motor Co. balance sheet showing a profit of $1.3 billion by one year's production of rusty vehicles sold to the consumer, i.e., "the worker."

We do agree with your statement that workers are management as an extension of the machinery by which to produce profits, to the gold plated salt mines. A few shifts in the pot-lines, the asbestos or copper mines, or even choker setting in the bush may well tarnish the gold plating in the eyes of your editorial writer.

As to job-training programs, apprenticeship training, etc., the unions are in a continuous struggle with employers. Unless the taxpayer pays for the the employers insist on hiring skilled workers from Europe and Asia assisted by the department of immigration's policies to the detriment of Canadian workers.

Your comments regarding labor's involvement in social change, in environmental issues, in essence a meaningful lifestyle, further displays your total ignorance of the trade union movement. What about the $150,000 study by Alcan workers? What about the area labor council's involvement on issues such as the Pearce Commission, land claims and at the present a major participation in the Thompson Oil Port Inquiry? What about the extended education programs through the Northwest College with a full calendar of courses in sociology, economics, industrial democracy and dozens of other courses designed for the union workers?

To reiterate, your editorial is little more than the usual utterings by papers such as yours finding it part of their allegiance to their advertisers to exert all efforts to destroy trade unions.

Except for this reply to keep the record straight, we find ourselves too busy doing the things that your editorial indicates we are not doing to engage in a lengthy running debate through your Press Committee

Blaze will speed study

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)- Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Wednesday that study of all bulk fuel storage facilities in British Columbia has been ordered by the provincial government.

Nielsen said in an interview at the scene of the multi-million dollar waterfront fuel depot fire Wednesday, that the blaze would undoubtedly speed up the study.

He said the study was ordered after the $3.5 million fire earlier in summer which destroyed warehouse facilities at Ogden Point in Victoria.

The cause of Wednesday's fire which destroyed bulk storage facilities belonging to Chevron Canada Ltd. and Shell Canada Ltd. has not yet been determined.

NEW PLANES COMING

Nuclear weapons on way out for Canadian Forces

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP)- Canada will get rid of the last of its nuclear next few years when it spends about $2 billion for new fighter planes.

Defence officials said this week the new fighters they are after will have no nuclear capability.

The country spent millions converting its CF-104 Starfighters serving in Europe to conventional-weapon troop support roles from nuclear roles starting about four years ago.

But the CF-101 Voodoos used in North American retained their nuclear capability and the U.S. owned nuclear rockets for the planes still are stored at some Canadian bases.

Military officials said nuclear weapons are outmoded for downing planes. Highly-sophisticated conventional rockets now do the job without the fallout.

The officials, briefing reporters on how they hope to get a new fighter now that six producers have been asked for proposals, emphasized that Canada must have new fighters by 1983 to replace the Voodoos and the Starfighters and eventually the CF-5 Freedom Fighters used for troop support in Canada and northern Europe.

They said it will cost about $500 million to keep the Voodoos and Starfighters flying until 1983 because of the difficulty of finding parts and maintaining the outmoded aircraft.

Brig. Gen Paul Manson, head of the inter-departmental group in charge of seeking and investigating proposals, said there is urgent need for replacement.

Because money supply is tight, officials are seeking a so called off the shelf plane that needs little or no modification to satisfy unique Canadian requirements.

Canada's fighter requirements are unique because the new aircraft must defend sovereignty now done defend air space and attack ground positions in central Europe now done by Starfighters and support troops in Norway after flying across the Atlantic now done by Freedom Fighters.

Officials concede the requirement may be such that it may be cheaper and more efficient to buy two types of aircraft, although this would cause severe loss of flexibility.

WITH INGENIOUS SUPERVISOR

Million-dollar machines march down C.N. track

VANCOUVER CP - Canadian National Railways has completed a $50-a-foot, 42 mile march down the Fraser Canyon to replace some of the most heavily-used track in Canada.

Keys to CNR's almost military operation were a cavalcade of multi-million dollar machines from five countries and the down to earth ingenuity of an equipment supervisor from Edmonton.

Supervising the track crew last month was Butch Whitman of Vancouver, who moved his column onto the mainline at 4 a.m. each morning to leave the way free for commercial traffic during the rest of the day.

"At times we spread out to 2 1/2 miles between the head and the tail and that was too great a distance," said Whitman, adding that unfinished track slowed down freight trains after work crews packed up for the day.

Despite the problems, Whitman said, his crew ground through the canyon at a rate of up to 4,930 feet a day, leaving behind heavyweight rails moored to concrete ties that the CNR hopes will last for many years.

The $6.8 million relaying unit, manned by 140 welders and other laborers, laid down 95,000 concrete ties during the project to provide a solid base for the 1,100 foot sections of welded track.

The 615 pound ties, produced by Con-Force Costain Ltd. of Edmonton, contain 250 pretensioned reinforcing wires and socketed mountings for patented rail fasteners. The fasteners, which replace the familiar railway spikes, can be clipped into place by one man operating a small has-powered machine.

Leading Whitman's column was a pair of straddle cranes riding rails temporarily mounted outside the old track.

The old track was ripped out, dropped on flat cars, rolled away.

A second pair of cranes rolled behind to lay down the new ties. In their wake was a procession of Swiss, French, Italian and American machines that pushed the rail into proper gauge, tore out rock and ballast around the ties, added new gravel and tamped it down.

Bringing up the rear was a propane crew which heated the new track to 30 degrees Celsius as a precaution against kinking in hot weather. Trains can small gaps in track caused by cold, Whitman said, but will almost certainly derail on a kink.

Making life easier for the crew was the ingenuity of Ed Chymko, of Edmonton, a 51 year old CNR equipment supervisor. Chymko devised a simple clamp to enable the cranes to travel over lengths of rail and a machine to push the new rails ahead of track crews.

He also built manually-operated lifting ear for retrieving and stowing steel spars used to support concrete ties during their ride from the factory.

Watching the whole operation were representatives of the British Columbia Railway, Burlington Northern, CP Rail, the Federal Railroad Administration of the United States and the railways of Australia, Britain and Poland.

The days of wooden ties and short rails are over on CNR's mainline, Whitman ton freights are pounding the old ties to pieces.

The rails and ties used in the canyon are the heaviest in the CNR system, he said, but will soon be found over much more track. The ties, for example, are only the first shipment of a 1.5 million tie order.

Champ shows power

FOREST HILL N.Y. (AP) - Defending champion Jimmy Connors, hitting his ground strokes with strength and precision and volleying superbly, put on a brilliant display of power tennis Thursday night in defeating Spain's Manuel Orantes 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 to advance to the semi-finals of the $462,420 U.S. Open championship.

Connors, the No. 2 seed from Belleville, Ill., had the plucky Spaniard racing from one side of the court to the other chasing his hard-hit shots, which constantly landed just within the sidelines or just short of the baseline.

Gail Bryant doesn't really intend to go skiing just yet, she's just looking forward to the Kitsumkalum Ski Club's five-day group tour to Jasper Nov. 27. The club still needs 22 people to join the 44 that have already signed up for the $174 per person trip. Skiers who can't wait for snow this winter can get in touch with the club's director in Kitimat, Dave Barclay or Gail, the Terrace Director.

Phillies slam mets

NEW YORK (AP) - Seventh inning home runs by Bake McBride, Mike Schmidt and Jay Johnstone powered Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-2 National League baseball victory over New York Mets Thursday.

Gene Garber, 8-6, who faced only one New York batter halting the Mets' fifth inning rally, got the victory when the National League's East Division leading Phillies scored three runs in the sixth to move in front 3-2.

McBride led off the Philadelphia seventh with his 15th homer of the season.

After Greg Luzinski singled, Johnstone smashed his 13th home run into the Mets' bullpen in right.

New York jumped out to a 2-0 lead, scoring single runs in the fourth and fifth innings on RBI singles by Doug Flynn and Mike Sail. Starter Nine Espinosa, 7-12, took the loss.

Five homers as Sox blast Expos

By DENNIS PASSA
TORONTO (CP) - Carlton Fisk knocked in five runs with two homers, and along with George Scott, helped Boston set a major league consecutive home run record as the Red Sox posted a 7-2 victory over Toronto Blue Jays before 19,183 fans Thursday night.

Fisk, who has knocked in 47 runs in his last five American League baseball games, including seven against the Blue Jays on Tuesday night in an 11-2 victory, hit a three-run homer in the second inning and a two run shot in the sixth off loser Jesse Jefferson, 8-15.

In the second inning, Scott followed Fisk's homer with a solo shot, the 16th time this season that the Red Sox have hit consecutive homers in a game. The old major league mark of 15 was set by Minnesota Twins in 1964.

Fisk's homers were his 22nd and 23rd of the season, while Scott hit his 32nd. Carl Yastrzemski hit his 23rd homer in the second inning and a solo drive in the eighth inning, accounting for the other Boston run.

The Blue Jays scored two runs off winner Mike Paxton, 9-4, in the sixth inning when Doug Ault hit a bases-loaded single, driving in Steve Staggs and Al Woods.

Paxton, making his first start of the season against the Blue Jays, held Toronto to three hits over the first five innings and was never in serious trouble.

Fly wins it for Cubs over Expos

CHICAGO (AP) - Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly scored Dave Rosello from third base in the 10th inning Thursday and gave Chicago Cubs a 3-2 National League baseball victory over Montreal Expos.

Rosello, pinch-hitting for reliever Bruce Sutter, led off the Chicago 10th with a single and went to third when Ivan DeJesus bunted and Expos catcher Gary Carter's throw to second went into centerfield. After Larry Bittner grounded out, Buckner followed with his sacrifice fly to deep left field.

Sutter, who struck out the first six batters he faced, tying a National League record for most strikeouts in a two by a reliever, improved his record to 6-1. Joe Kerrigan, 2-5, took the loss in relief.

Montreal took a 1-0 lead in the third on Dave Cash's double, Warren Cromartie's single, and Tony Perez's sacrifice fly.

The Expos increased their lead when Larry Parrish walked, was singled to third by Pepe Frias and scored on a grounder.

Chicago tied the score in the seventh. Bobby Murcer singled, Greg Gross walked, Manny Trillo singled home Murcer and Gross scored on Parrish's error.

Montreal's Steve Rogers hurled two-hit ball for five innings before leaving with a bruised right hip. He suffered the injury in the fourth when Bittner hit a liner back to the mound. The ball hit his hip and bounded to Carter, who threw out Bittner.

The first nine Cubs went out in order before Rogers yielded a solid single to right by DeJesus. Gross opened the Cubs fifth with a single for the other hit off Rogers, but was erased on Trillo's double play grounder.

Sutter's six consecutive strikeouts came in the eighth and ninth innings, and marked the first time a National League reliever had matched the feat since Don Gullett did it for Cincinnati on Aug. 23, 1970. Five other pitchers also share the record, which is one short of the major league mark of seven set by Denny McLain of Detroit Tigers in 1965.

Soccer union marshalls arguements for board

NEW YORK (AP)-Representatives of the North American Soccer League and the newly-formed NASL Players' Association, an offshoot of the National Football League Players' Association, presented arguments Thursday before National Labor Relations Board officer Richard A. Ross.

Ed Garvey, the executive director of the NFLPA and the main force behind the organization of the soccer players, said: "We came here hoping to work out recognition of the NASL Players Association on a friendly basis. However, we are confronted by an employer who is apparently determined to drag it out as long as possible."

Ross, an impartial investigator hearing officer, the hearing would continue through today but that no decision would be reached until he had made a report for the record.

The decision will not be issued by the NLRB for a period of time after examining briefs submitted by both the league and the union in the next week. The decision will be rendered by NLRB regional director Winifred D. Morio or the five member NLRB board in Washington.

The NASL was represented by lawyers Edward Levin and Robert Roinick.

Reds recover on sacrifice

CINCINNATI (AP)-George Foster drove in the winning run with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the ninth inning to snap Cincinnati Reds' three game losing streak with a 6-5 victory over San Francisco Giants on Thursday night.

With one out, Pete Rose reached first when first baseman Willie McCovey bobbled the throw from pitcher Randy Moffitt, 3-8. Rose stole second base and went to third on Ken Griffey's infield hit. An intentional walk to Joe Morgan set the stage for Foster's sacrifice fly in the National League baseball game.

The winning pitcher was reliever Pedro Borbon, 8-4. The Giants' attack was paced by McCovey's two homers off starter Paul Moskau. McCovey increased his career home run total to 491, within two of Lou Gehrig's 12th place total on the all time home run list.

San Francisco starter Charlie Williams was a victim of his own wildness in the first inning, walking two to were out, helping the Reds score four runs.

Pop go Yanks over Indians

CLEVELAND (AP)- A sacrifice fly by Chris Chambliss capped a three-run fifth inning that carried Ed Figueroa and New York Yankees to a 4-3 American League baseball victory over Cleveland Indians Thursday night.

Figueroa limited the Indians to eight hits as the Yankees picked up their third straight victory and 10th in the last 12 starts.

The Yankees came up with three unearned runs, including two of the three in the decisive fifth.

Willie Randolph led off that inning, reaching base on the first of two errors by shortstop Larvell Blanks. Bucky Dent followed with a hit and a bunt single by Mickey Rivers loaded the bases against Cleveland starter Jim Bibby, 12-11.

A sacrifice fly to right by Graig Nettles scored Randolph from third. Thurman Munson drove home a run with a single and Reggie Jackson drew a walk to load the bases again.

Chambliss then drove a ball to centre, scoring Rivers with the third run of the inning.

Palmer shoots to lead in B.C. open golf

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP)—Arnold Palmer and Lee Elder both shot six under par 65 Thursday to tie for the first round lead of the $200,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Mac McLendon and Lou Graham finished the 8,903 yard EnJoie Golf Club course one shot behind the two leaders.

Palmer finished with five birdies, an eagle and one bogey. Palmer's lead held up most of the day until Elder birdied the 18th hole to tie for first place.

"The gods were with me today," Elder said after catching up to Palmer on the final hole of the first round. "Whenever I missed a green I had a pretty good lie. It was the type of round you enjoy playing."

Elder finished the round with six birdies.

Palmer, who celebrates his 48th birthday birthday, Saturday, nearly passed up the tournament to spend the time with his mother in Latrobe, Pa. He has not won a tournament on the tour in four years and came into the B.C. Open 97th on the Professional Golfers' Association money list.

"I played a little better than I've been playing," Palmer said. "I seemed to hit the ball a little more solid than I have been, and I putted reasonably well."

Lee Trevino dropped out of the tournament after the first nine holes complaining of back and leg troubles.

Lenny Watkins, who entered the B.C. Open fresh from victories in the PGA championship and the World Series of Golf, finished the first round with a two over par 75, eight shots behind the leaders.

CINCINNATI BENGALS

A 'snootful' to play in this league

By GARY MIHOCES
The Associated Press

Bill Tiger Johnson, the plain-talking Texas who coaches Cincinnati Bengals, looked over the National Football League schedule and summed up the American Division Central Conference.

"It's a snootful to play Pittsburgh, Houston and Cleveland twice," he said. "It's also a snootful to play two with Cincinnati. After a beefy college draft the Bengals might halt Pittsburgh's string of three division titles."

The Steelers last season included a 1-4 start and 10 wins in a row. It ended with a playoff loss in Oakland, where the spectators included injury 1,000 yard rushers Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier.

"I don't know if it was because Franco and Rocky couldn't play, but the old Steeler fire wasn't there," said Joe Greene.

"But the Raiders were worthy champs," he added. "I'm not taking anything away from them."

The defence that helped win those titles will be minus linebacker Andy Russell, retired, and cornerback Mel Blount, holding out.

Rookie Robin Mad Man Cole has played well at Russell's spot and four-year veteran Jim Allen ably replaces Blount.

Though missing the playoffs, the Bengals matched the Steelers 10-4 record. Cincinnati's only other losses were to Oakland and Baltimore.

"I sure as hell wouldn't want to feel we've gone downhill," said Johnson, the second-year coach.

Newcomers include Eddie Edwards and Wilson Whitley, two defensive linemen drafted in the first round.

Cincinnati used another first-round choice on 6-foot-5-inch tight end Mike Cobb. A second-round pick yielded 248 pound fullback Pete Johnson.

The Bengals have a schedule that includes only two 1976 playoff teams, Pittsburgh and Minnesota.

By contrast, Cleveland Browns have one of the toughest schedules in the league. Their first four foes are Cincinnati, New England, Pittsburgh and Oakland, and they have a later game with Los Angeles.

That means the Browns, 9-5 last year after going 3-11 the season before, might be an improved team with a poorer record in 1977. "The first four weeks are going to be a key for us," said Peter Hahzy, promoted early this year to general manager of the Browns. "If we can go 2-2 we're going to surprise a lot of people. If we don't go 2-2, it still doesn't mean our season will be over."

Browns' first-round choice Robert Jackson, expected to start at middle linebacker, injured his knee early in training camp and is out for the season. And the Browns have been unable to sign second-round pick Tom Skladany.

During the offseason, it looked as though quarterback Dan Fouts wouldn't be with the Oilers. Upset with the state of affairs in Houston, he pleaded to be traded to Los Angeles.

That plea ended when Los Angeles got Joe Namath, and Pastorini is still with an Oilers team that fell to 5-9 going 10-4 the season before.

Newcomers to Houston include rookie running backs Tim Wilson and Bob pair of third-round choices with power, and free-agent Horace Belton, a 5-foot-9-inch runner from Southeastern Louisiana.

Record broken

TORONTO (CP)—Boston Red Sox broke the major league baseball record for consecutive game home runs during a season Thursday night when Carlton Fisk and George Scott hit successive homers in the second inning against Toronto Blue Jays.

Fisk hit his 22nd home run off Toronto starter Jesse Jefferson with two men on in the second inning, and Scott followed with a solo shot for his 32nd of the year.

From soldier to chairman, CNR head wants to aid unity

By BOB DOUGLAS
MONTREAL (CP) - J.A. Dextraze, who considers Quebec Premier Rene Levesque a personal friend, says he would like to "help unit in the country" in his new role as chairman of Canadian National Railways CNR.

A fervent federalist, the recently-retired chief of defence staff admits he is a layman on railway matters and says he is searching for a clear place for himself in the publicly-owned corporation.

"I would like to be closely associated with biculturalism, bilingualism, see what I can do to help the company and the people concerned and help unit in the country," he said in an interview.

Dextraze, 58, a former career soldier, took over his new $85,000 a year job Sept. 1 from Pierre Taschereau, who now is chairman of Air Canada.

During the interview, he used military terms like strategy, tactics and battalion commander as he described his future responsibilities.

Operating power at CNR rests in the hands of president Robert Bandeen, who is chief executive officer. Some observers were intrigued by the general's appointment, expecting a collision between him and Bandeen.

But Dextraze was anxious to dispel such thoughts. He said he is ready to help but not take over command of the corporation.

"I know what the chain of command is. Nothing can be worse than having ill-timed interference."

Taschereau is a lawyer and the CNR legal division reported to him but Dextraze has no other area of interest, perhaps passenger operations and national unity.

Asked what he can do to promote national unity in his new job, Dextraze would not be specific, but suggested he might help those who are furthering bilingualism in CNR.

Dextraze wrote the bilingualism policy for the armed forces that was eventually adopted several years ago.

The CNR chairman said he believes CNR headquarters should remain in Quebec despite the separatist scare. He said he would be prepared to move parts of the corporation for business reasons, but not simply because of the independence issue.

Dextraze said he anticipates no difficulty in talking with the Levesque government, since the premier "is a personal friend of mine."

He first met Levesque when the then-journalist visited Dextraze and Canadian troops at the battlefield during the Korean War.

The relationship was renewed when Dextraze was an armed forces commander in Quebec City and Levesque was a minister in the Quebec Liberal government of the early 1960s.

Born of an English-Canadian mother and a French-Canadian father, Dextraze has roots in Quebec that go back to the 1600s. His family also has a long military tradition, continuing among his own sons. One son is a captain in the Canadian Forces and another son died in Vietnam while serving with U.S. forces.

Dextraze said there have been some obvious wrongs in Canada, such as the overwhelming dominance of English-speaking people in business, even in Quebec. But that problem was as much the fault of French Canada as it was of English Canada.

He said French-Canadians concentrated on producing priests and lawyers in the past and neglected the business world. But that now is changing with more qualified Quebecers entering business.

Levesque coming to Calgary

QUEBEC (CP) - Premier Rene Levesque is to make his first visit to Western Canada since becoming premier last year when he visits Calgary next Wednesday.

Levesque's office said today the premier will address a luncheon meeting during the annual National Conference of Editorial Writers.

Levesque has addressed students at the University of Prince Edward Island and given a speech to the Economic Club in New York City since the Parti Quebecois was elected.

Although the premier has not been to Western Canada, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin has spoken in Winnipeg and Economic Development Minister Bernard Landry has visited Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Amin in coma after surgery

NAIROBI Kenya (AP) - President Idi Amin of Uganda was reported by one in a coma after undergoing surgery in a Kampala hospital for an undisclosed ailment.

Robert Astles, British-born confidant of the 51 year old president, said in a telephone interview in Nairobi that he has no further details.

Asked for reason for Amin's operation, he replied: "We don't exactly know. But he's in a coma. We believe he'll pull out of it. I'm going over to the hospital right now to see what's happening."

Astles was speaking from office in Kampala. He is a white Ugandan citizen married to a black Ugandan, Mary Astles, who is Ugandan culture minister.

Earlier today, Radio Uganda announced Amin underwent the operation by a Soviet surgeon in Kampala's Nulago Hospital. The broadcast said the president was accompanied to the hospital Wednesday by the Soviet ambassador to Uganda, Dr. Feodor Senkov, who was identified as the surgeon.

Amin, self-declared field marshal and president for 10 years in Uganda, was toppled by Milton Obote in a coup backed by junior army officers.

His rule has been marked by violence and bloodshed as he allegedly eliminated rival tribes who threatened his grip on the landlocked African country.

Married five times and divorced three, Amin is reputed to have fathered at least 36 children and once said he planned to have 40.

Scents Differentiate Manufacturers now use scents to differentiate their products from the competing brands. Consumers like fragrance because they associate good smell with a job well done, specialists say.

Moluccans vandalize schools

ASSEN, Netherlands (AP) - Armed gangs of South Moluccans set fire to two schools and wounded a policeman with gunfire Thursday in this northern Dutch town where eight of their compatriots are on trial for hijacking a train and seizing a school last May.

Armed with gasoline bombs, the Moluccans set fire to two schools and destroyed one of them. They also attacked other buildings including a hall belonging to the Dutch Red Cross and then took shots at firemen called in to fight the blaze.

A 23 year old policeman was hit in the stomach by a Moluccan sniper during the eight hour confrontation. His condition was described as satisfactory following an operation.

Children from Assen's 55 elementary and primary schools were sent home and municipal authorities said the schools will remain closed until Monday.

When the Moluccans eventually broke up, they returned to the Moluccan district and barricaded themselves with large pieces of wood spread across the roads. Police made no immediate attempt to remove the barricades.

Hundreds of extra police with armored vehicles were called into Assen at the beginning of the week for the start of the trial which is expected to end today.

Moluccans have denounced the trial as a "farce."

More than 100 children and their teachers were brought to a bloodless end and the four Moluccans were arrested. Two hostages aboard the train also died in the rescue operation.

Another Moluccan was subsequently arrested and charged with helping plan the raids and he is also on trial with the seven surviving gunmen. They face up to 10 years imprisonment.

There have been several flare-ups involving Moluccans in the Netherlands since the end of the sieges, but the latest outbreak in Assen was the worst.

About 40,000 Moluccans live in the Netherlands in 60 scattered communities.

Militants among them demand an independent homeland on their native islands in Indonesia, once a Dutch colony. They have used violence in recent years to try to force the Dutch government to back their demands.

Moluccan extremists hijacked another train and took over the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam in December, 1975, and in April of the same year police foiled a Moluccan plot to kidnap Queen Juliana.

Quebec, Ottawa, compete for French envoy's favour

By PAUL GESSELL
OTTAWA CP - The delicate balance of the Canada-Quebec-France triangle has again been set awry, this time because of the visit of French Justice Minister Alain Petrefitte to Canada.

The competition between the federal and Quebec governments for the affections of Petrefitte, who was to arrive in Montreal late Thursday, is the latest incident to jangle the nerves of protocol-conscious government officials.

Although Quebec-France relations have often troubled federal officials since the cry of "vive le Quebec libre" by former French president Charles de Gaulle in 1967, the election last November of a secessionist government in Quebec has given rise to a new round of protocol questions.

When Petrefitte's visit to Quebec was announced a few weeks ago, no mention was made of a trip to Ottawa. It was announced as an "official" visit to Quebec and touted as an example of harmonious relations between Quebec City and Paris.

The Canadian embassy in Paris responded Wednesday by announcing that Petrefitte also planned to visit Ottawa after the Quebec stay.

An external affairs official said the stop in Ottawa, Monday and Tuesday, was planned from the beginning but that the federal government had been tardy in announcing the visit.

Justice department officials, however, were hard pressed to provide many details on the planned discussions between the two ministers except to say talks will centre on "wide issues."

The Canadian embassy in Paris had also announced that Petrefitte would meet Prime Minister Trudeau. Neither Trudeau's office nor the justice department were sure the meeting would take place.

A spokesman for Trudeau's office had received information on the visit only Wednesday.

Pop tunes soothe Rhodesia's race tension

SALISBURY Reuter - To the jingle of a pop tune, white Rhodesian businessmen have begun an advertising campaign today to improve relations between the country's warring black and white populations.

Its key word is harmony. Its slogan: "You don't suddenly have to love your neighbor - just understand him."

Campaign organizers told a news conference it is not too late to bolster race relations in Rhodesia, whose white minority government is under attack by guerrillas of the black majority.

The jingle goes: "Harmony, harmony, let's all live together in harmony and sing away the hurt and fear - a great new day will soon be here."

The campaign is organized by chambers of commerce and mines, industrial and farming associations under the umbrella of the Private Sector Co-ordinating Committee.

Committee chairman Milk Dafy said Rhodesia's economic future depends on "the interaction between people" of the white community and its black neighbors who outnumber them 20 to one.

In coming weeks black and white Rhodesians will be bombarded on television and radio, in cinemas, in newspapers and through posters in public places with the campaign message.

An advertising executive who helped prepare the campaign said: "Our objectives are to increase harmony and decrease racial tension."

The prime target of the campaign will be Rhodesia's 270,000 whites. "We believe the white community must make the initial move to capitalize on the latent good will in our community," he said.

The organizers hope the theme tune will make the Rhodesian hit parade.

All the advertisements stress black and white harmony at all age levels, at work and at home.

Radio messages are also being broadcast in the Rhodesian languages of English, Shona and Ndebele.

NATIONAL GROUPS

Children's rights campaign set

By JULIET O'NEILL
OTTAWA (CP) - A group of Canadian organizations is planning a campaign to convince adults that children have basic rights.

About 20 representatives of almost 70 organizations began tossing ideas around Thursday for a national campaign. Target date is 1979 which has been declared the International Year of the Child by the United Nations.

The cost, the programs, the public relations messages and whether many children will get involved still is undecided.

But it is not only help for starving children in developing countries that the campaign will be aimed at, said Edward Marks, UN associate director of the campaign.

"Even in the industrialized world, there are so many children who are not properly immunized, who are illiterate, handicapped, prey to violence and abuse or malnutrition," he said in an interview.

Even the parameters of childhood differ among various organizations, countries and provinces. The question of when life begins and the age that childhood ends is part of the debate.

Patricia MacKay, Toronto president of the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, said the rights of a child begin with pre-natal nutrition.

She said children are taught about a democratic society in schools that are run like dictatorships, and often are not permitted to make decisions in situations that affect them.

In rural communities, children often get self-esteem with work responsibilities essential to the family well-being. But city children often are relegated "to take out the garbage and that's it."

Organizations involved in the campaign represent children, women, parents, social service agents, teachers, nutritionists, churches, unions, foreign aid experts, Indians, universities and government.

They include Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, National Farmers Union, National Indian Brotherhood, Canadian Teachers Federation, Canadian Mental Health Association and Canadian Hunger Foundation, among others. The chief organizer is UNICEF, the UN children's fund, set up to collect and provide aid for the more than one billion children in developing countries.

The children's year marks the 20th anniversary of the UN declaration of the rights of the child which include the right to special protection for a healthy, free and dignified life, the right to social security, including adequate nutrition, housing, recreation and medical services and the right to protection from neglect, cruelty, exploitation and discrimination.

Chilean gets status

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) - Landed immigrant status has been granted to Alfonso Miranda, 25, a native of Chile who was denied status as a political refugee five months ago.

Miranda, a resident of this central British Columbia city, claimed to be a political refugee because of his support for Chilean Premier Salvador Allende whose Socialist government was overthrown by a military junta.

"It's been like a bad dream, just terrible," Miranda said during a telephone interview from Hong Kong today.

"When I left Canada in April I had a hope of returning in two or three weeks and had to leave my wife in the U.S."

Miranda said he and his wife Myriam moved here in 1975 to escape political persecution in Chile.

When informed by immigration authorities that they were living here illegally, the two applied for political refugee status and were turned down. They then left for San Francisco where they were again refused political refugee status after making the required application.

Miranda then left for Hong Kong where he obtained a visa and eventually, his landed immigrant status.

He said he expected to return here in two weeks following completion of a medical examination. He will return with his wife, now in Seattle, and hopes to bring his two children who are living with his parents in Chile.

Miranda is the second Chilean to leave Prince George under similar circumstances.

Ricardo Leiva and his family were forced to leave the country to make their immigration application and were allowed entry to Canada as legal immigrants on Jan. 18, 1977, after six months in Spain.

Rail workers set demands

MONTREAL (CP) - Officials of 17 unions representing 100,000 Canadian railway workers met here Thursday to begin drafting contract demands as a prelude to the country's largest single round of collective bargaining.

The current two year agreement expires Dec. 31. The demands which come out of the current meetings will be presented during the first week of October to Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific, which also bargain for the country's 11 smaller railways at the table.

Union officials say traditional issues such as wages, job security and pension improvements are almost certain to be key items.

The 12 union officials meeting here are delegates from the Associated Railway Unions ARU, an organization representing the 17 unions.

The 5,000 member Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which bargained separately during the last contract negotiations, has rejoined the ARU.

AIB booklet popular

More than 24,000 Canadians have contacted the Anti-Inflation Board (AIB) for a copy of the booklet "Kick the Inflation Habit", a publication outlining what the consumer can do to help combat inflation.

Figures recently released by the AIB show that people from every region of Canada have been requesting the booklet, with Ontario leading the way with 13,796 requests.

The book covers such subjects as credit buying, how inflation affects jobs, shopping habits, inflation in the home and general information on inflation.

After Ontario, Quebec people requested 4,208 copies of the booklet, while the Maritimes took 3,632 and the four western provinces 2,379.

An AIB spokesman said the first press run of the booklet was 50,000 copies and that every indication suggests another press run in the near future.

More than 20,000 copies of the publication have been requested in English, while almost 3,500 have been requested in French. The booklet has been available since the end of June.

The AIB says that the reaction to the booklet is consistent with the public's concern generally with the problem of inflation.

The spokesman says the Board has processed almost half a million requests for information since the beginning of the AIB almost two years ago.

A major portion was for 300,000 "Inflation Debater", an education kit designed for high schools, sent out on request.

The public has contacted the Board to complain about prices or make inquiries almost 75,000 times.

The spokesman noted that these figures do not include information sent to companies and unions during the normal day-to-day processing of cases.

"Nor do these figures include the dissemination of information through such things as annual reports, advertising and public service notices", he said.

Fingers in the Dike

by JIM SMITH

Well, here we are in the midst of the most-serious unemployment mess since the dreary days of the 1930s — and it promises to get much worse by the end of winter. So what is government doing? In typical fashion, our national leaders are sticking their fiscal fingers in the economic dike and praying for a miracle.

You can count on one thing about government: whenever it gets into economic trouble, it responds by trying to shore up big business. The assumption in Ottawa is that big business is the foundation of our economy. But, as a new book called "Small Business: Building a Balanced Economy" by York University's Dr. Rein Peterson strongly points out, big business isn't necessarily good business. Not, at least, for all Canadians.

Dr. Peterson spent a year investigating some of the more popular beliefs about the merits of big business. The results of his investigations are surprising. For instance, although big business is believed to be the most significant source of employment in Canada, in fact, only 15% of the big firm's total costs are for wages. The small firm, on the other hand, pays out approximately 30% of its total expenditures as wages. So the small firm is responsible for more employment, per dollar of sales, than the large firm.

Now, you might suspect that the government would go out of its way to help the small businessman. After all, a thriving small business sector could solve much of the employment crisis. But the government doesn't see it that way.

Instead, the small firm because it has a higher proportion of its business tied up in labour — bears a heavier paperwork and tax burden than the large firm. Not only must the employer act as the government's tax collector, but it must also contribute to unemployment insurance and pension funds on the employee's behalf. Meanwhile, the big firms — which can use machines to replace large numbers of workers — receive tax breaks from the government and are freed from much of the paperwork that comes with employing others.

The way it works out, the small firm is actually paying for the social costs that are created by the big firm. In socialist countries, Dr. Peterson discovered, the big, state-owned firms consistently lose money; the deficit is paid out of taxes on the profitable small firms.

And what about the theory that the small firm gets tax concessions that aren't available to big business? Dr. Peterson found that the average smallest corporation actually pays 27.7% tax on earnings while the biggest corporation, after allowing for capital incentives, pays 28%. In other words, the so-called "dual corporate tax rate" which the government claims means much lower taxes for small business than for big business is a sham.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business has suggested that UIC and CPP contributions should be removed from the employer's responsibilities and tied in to the income tax system. Dr. Peterson's findings back up the Federation and prove it's time the government quit relying on fiscal fingers in the economic dike.

Questions chest pains

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the past four to five years I have been troubled by heart poundings and palpitations, chest heaviness and sometimes chest pain under my front lower ribs, after exercising or after emotional or physical stress. I have consulted and have confidence in our two internists. They have done electrocardiograms while I was resting and after exercise, given a stress test, done blood work, tried Isordil on a temporary basis and have declared me a healthy middle-aged woman.

I'm 51 years old, 5 feet 8 and weigh 148 pounds. My blood pressure is 110 over 70. I had a complete hysterectomy in 1969. My parents are living, aged 78. My grandparents died of heart disease in their 80s.

Exercise is a part of our family. We swim year round, play tennis, walk and I ride a bike. Our habits are moderate and we do not smoke or do a thing in excess. We have la dolce vita.

Why then do these feelings persist? When it happens I try to ease off the exercise for a day or two and then do feel better. I also get some relief by taking two aspirin or a Valium at night when the palpitations interfere with sleep. They are getting worse and I am beginning to treat myself like an invalid and have almost stopped participating in these sports which I love.

My husband also has the same symptoms and he, too, has checked out in perfect health. What to do? Is there something we may be doing to cause this? Are we overdoing the exercise department? I would be grateful for your help.

DEAR READER — With the good evaluation you describe it is unlikely that there is anything seriously wrong with your heart. Palpitations and even certain forms of chest discomfort with the palpitations can occur in people who have no heart disease at all. Nevertheless, the sensations you describe are disconcerting to say the least and they are real.

Exercise seldom produces such symptoms in healthy people except in people who really are overdoing it beyond the level of their physical fitness. We could take an office worker and have him do too much exercise too soon and he could develop such symptoms. He could accomplish the same level of fitness without symptoms if he progresses at a slower rate, taking months instead of weeks to get in shape.

Coffee and other drinks containing caffeine may be a factor. Since you don't smoke you can forget about cigarettes as a cause. Digestive disorders can trigger such attacks in some people. You need to be sure you don't have a hiatal hernia (hernia of part of the stomach through the diaphragm) and make some effort to correct any digestive disorders you may have such as spastic colon with trapping of gas. A good diet including adequate amounts of cereal bulk should help in that department.

Anxiety and nervousness can contribute to such attacks. A tranquilizer in these instances may help. Regular vigorous exercise may be associated with a slight decrease in potassium content which may be your problem. This can be important. To prevent this, an 8-ounce glass of orange juice a day will keep your potassium levels up.

To give you more information on palpitations I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1977

ARIES

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 20) A pleasant surprise indicated — possibly the settlement of an outstanding obligation. Romance highlighted, too.

TAURUS

(Apr. 21 to May 21) A splendid period in which to plan home improvements; also to give serious thought to a property deal.

GEMINI

(May 22 to June 21) With your innate ingenuity, you will probably discover more than one novel way of meeting day's demands. Others are competing for identical goals. Push on!

CANCER

(June 22 to July 23) Stellar influences warn against indiscretion, un-conventionality. Stress your innate conservatism — especially in dealings with the opposite sex.

LEO

(July 24 to Aug. 23) There may be a hitch in certain arrangements now — especially those involving travel. Be prepared to improvise.

VIRGO

(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23) To be avoided: irrational moves, hasty conclusions, misjudgments through carelessness or prejudice. This won't be difficult if you display your usual foresight.

LIBRA

(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) An "iffy" sort of day, much depending on your initiative and good judgment. You have plenty of planetary backing to carry out worthwhile moves and plans, however.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 24 to Nov. 23) Influences beneficent. Take advantage by pressing on toward lofty objectives. Job and financial interests especially favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) Tip-top Jupiter influences foster more of the grit and ingenuity that won laurels for you in the past. This will be a good day for innovations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't be tricked by the bizarre. Overactivity also unwise. A well-regulated day will bring achievement, stimulate incentive. Avoid obstinacy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Some unusual activities indicated, but certain tedious matters will require attention nonetheless. Pep them up with one of those ingenious "twists" at which you are so adept.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some trends changing. Synchronize your activities to accommodate. Curb a tendency to become overly emotional in a relatively unimportant situation.

YOU BORN TODAY are always eager to be numbered among the front-runners in ambitious and worthwhile enterprises even though you may, at times, become dispirited over your life's work or your means. You usually rise above such moods, however, because you are not only ingenious and basically optimistic, but have that important "will to win." You have an affinity for science and may be especially attracted to electronics or physics; may do important research work in either field. You could succeed in the theater — as actor, producer, playwright or critic and, with your gift for writing, would make an excellent journalist. Other areas in which, properly trained, you could excel: teaching, painting, any occupation which involves travel. Birthdate of: Luigi Galvani, Ital. physicist; Leo Tolstol, Russian author.

Dear Abby

Teen Drivers: A Ghostly Warning

DEAR ABBY: Last summer you wrote something that virtually saved my life — and maybe the lives of many others. I had just gotten my driver's license and that column really opened my eyes. I think about it every time I turn on the ignition in my car. I am enclosing it. Please run it again. And run it every year for those kids who may have missed it.

LOVES LIFE AT 18

DEAR LOVES: Seldom has a column made such an impact as the one to which you refer. I shall repeat it with pleasure:

PLEASE GOD, I'M ONLY 17

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheeled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded, "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free! It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard the deafening crash and felt a terrific jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream. Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything. Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head. I can't be dead. I'm only 17, I've got a date tonight. I am supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a drawer. My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please... somebody... wake me up! Get me out of here. I can't bear to see my Mom and Dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can barely walk. My brother and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody! No one can believe this. And I can't believe it, either.

Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance. Please, God, I'm only 17!

DEAR ABBY: I certainly hope you or your readers can help me with my problem. Is there such a group as "Spenders Anonymous" for "Clothes-sholics"? If not, I would be interested in starting a local chapter.

We are a lower middle-income family. I started working recently to help with family finances, but all I do is shop! I am compulsive about buying clothes, and I can't seem to control myself.

Please help me. I am desperate.

McKINNEY, TEX.

DEAR McKINNEY: If there is such a group, I'll surely hear about it and let you know. If not, there ought to be.

DEAR ABBY: Am I wrong for refusing to sleep with the man I love because he wants his dog to sleep on the floor of our bedroom? When I walked out, he said the dog always slept on the floor in the same bedroom with him and his first wife, who is now deceased.

Abby, I have never had dogs and I am not used to them. I told him he could put the dog in the other bedroom, but he said he wouldn't do it — that next to his deceased wife, the dog came first. So where do I stand?

NO DOG LOVER

DEAR NO: Right behind his dog.

DEAR ABBY: My older sister irritates me no end. She never takes my word for anything. She always has to check it out. If I were in the habit of lying, I could understand it, but I'm not. I always try to stick to the truth.

Another thing about her that bugs me is that if I happen to be out when she phones me, when she finally reaches me she always asks where I've been. Abby, I just hate having to account for my whereabouts. She doesn't have to know every move I make!

I'm not a child. Far from it. I'm a married woman in my 40s.

Any suggestions? YOUNGER SISTER

DEAR SISTER: Yes, grow up. You're still intimidated by your older sister. Don't blame her if you lack the courage to tell her that: (a) you resent her checking out everything you say because you're generally truthful, and (b) if you want her to know where you've been, you'll volunteer the information.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.
